EXPERIENCE

PERSONAL PROFILE

Driven by the belief that landscape architecture is a tool for social and environmental healing. As a final-year MA student at the University of Edinburgh, I have developed a design language that prioritizes the intersection of ecological resilience and human-centric design, ensuring that public spaces serve both people and the planet. I combine a keen eye for detail with a commitment to designing spaces that foster genuine connection and long-term well-being.

I bring a carefully considered and thorough, detail-oriented approach to every stage of the design process, from initial site analysis to technical detailing. I am eager to bring this blend of creativity and technical precision to a visionary team committed to innovation and meaningful environmental change.
